

WIN

To WINCE. v. n. [guings, Welsh.] To kick as impatient of a rider, or of pain.

I will fit as quiet as a lamb,
Room, room, for my horse will wince,
If he came within so many yards of a prince. B. John.
The angry beast did straight resent
The wrong done to his fundament,
Began to kick, and fling, and wince,
As if he had been beside his sense. Hudibras.

WINCH. n. f. [guincher, French, to twist.] A windlass; something held in the hand by which a wheel or cylinder is turned.

Put a winch with the wheel. Mortimer.
To WINCH. v. a. [The same with wince, or perhaps from guincher, French, to twist; winch signifying sometimes to writhe or contort the body.] To kick with impatience; to shrink from any uneasiness.

We who have free souls,
It touches not, let the gall'd jade wince;
Our withers are unwrung. Shakespeare. Hamlet.
Have these bones rattled, and this head
So often in thy quarrel bled!
Nor did I ever wince or grudge it. Hudibras.
This left allusion gaul'd the panther more;
Yet seem'd he not to wince, tho' fiercely pain'd. Dryden.
Their confidences are gall'd, and this makes them wince
and fling, as if they had some mettle. Tilleyson.

WINCOPIE. n. f.
There is a small red flower in the stubble-fields, which country people call the wincopie; which if it open in the morning, you may be sure, a fair day will follow. Bacon.

WIND. n. f. [pinb, Saxon; wind, Dutch; gwynt, Welsh.]
1. Wind is when any tract of air moves from the place it is in, to any other, with an impetus that is sensible to us, wherefore it was not ill called by the antients, a swifter course of air; a flowing wave of air; a flux, effusion, or stream of air. Mulchenbroek.

The worthy fellow is our general. He's the rock, the oak not to be wind-shaken. Shakespeare. Coriolanus.

Love's heralds should be thoughts,
Which ten times faster glides than the fun beams,
Driving back shadows ever low'ring hills.
Therefore do nimble pinion'd doves draw love;
And therefore hath the wind-swift Cupid wings. Shakespeare.
Falmouth lieth farther out in the trade way, and so offereth a sooner opportunity to wind-driven ships than Plymouth. Carew.
Wind is nothing but a violent motion of the air, produced by its rarefaction, more in one place than another, by the sun-beams, the attractions of the moon, and the combinations of the earth's motions. Obyen.

2. Direction of the blast from a particular point. As eastward; westward.

I'll give thee a wind.
I myself have all the other,
And the very points they blow;
All the quarters that they know
T' th' shipman's card. Shakespeare. Macbeth.

3. Breath; power or act of respiration.

If my wind were but long enough to say my prayers, I would repent. Shakespeare.
His wind he never took whilst the cup was at his mouth, but justly observ'd the rule of drinking with one breath. Hale.
The perfume of the flowers, and their virtues to cure shortness of wind in purify old men, seems to agree most with the orange. Temple.

It stop'd at once the passage of his wind,
And the free soul to flitting air resign'd. Dryden.

4. Air caused by any action.

On each side her
Stood pretty dimpled boys, like smiling Cupids
With divers colour'd fans, whose wind did seem
To glow the delicate cheeks which they did cool. Shakespeare.
In an organ, from one board of wind,
To many a row of pipes the sound-board breathes. Milton.

5. Breath modulated by an instrument.

Where the air is pent, there breath or other blowing, which carries but a gentle percussion, suffices to create sound; as in pipes and wind instruments. Bacon.

Their instruments were various in their kind,
Some for the bow, and some for breathing wind. Dryden.

6. Air impregnated with scent.

A hare had long escap'd pursuing hounds,
By often shifting into distant grounds,
Till finding all his artifices vain,
To save his life, he leap'd into the main.
But there, alas! he could no safety find,
A pack of dog-fish had him in the wind. Swift.

7. Flatulence; windiness.

It turns
Wisdom to folly, as nourishment to wind. Milton.

8. Any thing insignificant or light as wind.

Think not with wind of airy threats to awe. Milton.

9. Down the WIND. To decay.

A man that had a great veneration for an image in his house, found that the more he prayed to it to prosper him in the world, the more he went down the wind still. L'Estrange.
10. To take or have the WIND. To gain or have the upper-hand.

Let a king in council beware how he opens his own inclinations too much, for else counsellors will but take the wind of him; instead of giving free counsel. Bacon.

To WIND. v. a. [pinban, Sax. winden, Dutch. from the noun.]
1. To blow; to found by inflation.

The squire 'gan nigher to approach,
And wind his horn under the cattle wall,
That with the noise it shook as it would fall. F. 2.

Every Triton's horn is winding,
Welcome to the wat'ry plain. Dryden.

Ye vigorous swains! while youth ferments your blood,
Wind the shrill horn, or spread the waving net. Pope.

2. To turn round; to twist.

Nero could touch and time the harp well; but in government sometimes he used to wind the pins too high, and sometimes let them down too low. Bacon.
The figure of a sturdy woman done by Michael Angelo, walking and winding of linen cloaths, in which act she wrings out the water that made the fountain. Wotton.
Wind the wood-bine round this arbour. Milton.

3. To regulate in action.

He vaulted with such ease into his feat,
As if an angel dropt down from the clouds,
To turn and wind a fiery pegasus,
And witch the world with noble horsemanship. Shakespeare.

In a commonwealth or realm,
The government is call'd the helm;
With which, like vessels under sail,
They're turn'd and winded by the tail. Hudibras.

4. To note; to follow by scent.

5. To turn by shifts or expedients.

Whence turning of religion's made
The means to turn and wind a trade. Hudibras.

6. To introduce by insinuation.

From Rome all season'd offices, and to wind
Yourself into a power tyrannical. Shakespeare. Coriolanus.
Edmund, seek him out, frame me into him, frame the business after your own wisdom. Shakespeare. King Lear.
Little arts and dexterities they have to wind in such things into discourse. Government of the Tongue.

7. To change.

Were our legislature vested in the prince, he might wind and turn our constitution at his pleasure, and shape our government to his fancy. Addison.

8. To entwine; to enclose; to encircle.

Sleep thou and I will wind thee in my arms. Shakespeare.
You know me well, and herein spend but time
To wind about my love with circumstance. Shakespeare.

Sometime am I
All wound with adders who with cloven tongues
Do hiss me into madness. Shakespeare.

9. To WIND out. To extricate.

When he found himself dangerously embarked he bethought himself of all possible ways to disentangle himself, and to wind himself out of the labyrinth he was in. Clarendon.

10. To WIND up. To bring to a small compass, as a bottom of thread.

Without solemnly winding up one argument, and intimating that he began another, he lets his thoughts, which were fully possessed of the matter, run in one continued strain. Lack.
11. To WIND up. [Used of a watch.] To convolve the spring; to put in order to a certain end.

I frown the while, and perchance wind up my watch, or play with some rich jewel. Shakespeare.

Fate seem'd to wind him up for fourscore years,
Yet freshly ran he on, ten winters more.
Till like a clock worn out with calling time,
The wheels of weary life at last stood still. Dryden.

Will not the author of the universe, having made an automaton, which can wind up itself, see whether it hath food still, or gone true. Grew.

12. To WIND up. To raise by degrees.

These he did so wind up to his purpose that they withdrew from the court. Eloyard.

When they could not coolly convince him, they rallied and called him an heretic: thus they wound up his temper to a pitch, and treacherously made use of that infirmity. Her.

13. To WIND up. To straiten a string by turning that on which it is rolled; to put in tune.

Hylas! why fit we mutes
Now that each bird salutes the spring?
Wind up the slacken'd strings of thy lute,
Never canst thou want matter to sing. Waller.

The

WIN

Your lute may wind its strings but little higher
To tune their notes to that immortal quire. Prior.

To WIND up. To put in order for regular action: from a watch.

O you kind gods!
Cure this great breach of his abused nature;
The untun'd and jarring senses, O, wind up,
Of this child chang'd father. Shakespeare.

The weyrd sisters, hand-in-hand,
Potters of the sea and land,
Thus do go about, about,
Thrice to thine, and thrice to mine,
And thrice again to make up nine:
Peace, the charm's wound up. Shakespeare. Macbeth.

To WIND. v. n.

1. To turn; to change.

So swift your judgments turn and wind,
You cast our fleetest wits a mile behind. Dryden.

2. To turn; to be convolved.

Some plants can support themselves, and some others creep along the ground, or wind about other trees, and cannot support themselves. Bacon's Natural History.

3. To move round.

If I aught obstruct thy course, yet stand not still,
But wind about, till thou hast topp'd the hill. Denham.

4. To proceed in flexures.

It shall not wind with such a deep indent,
As rob me of so rich a bottom here. Shakespeare.

He winds with ease
Through the pure marble air his oblique way,
Amongst innumerable stars. Milton's Paradise Lost.

It was a rock winding with one ascent. Milton.

The silver Thames, her own domestick flood,
Shall bear her vessels, like a sweeping train;
And often wind, as of his mistress proud,
With longing eyes to meet her face again. Dryden.

You that can teach those many corner'd minds,
Where woman's crooked fancy turns and winds. Dryden.

Still fix thy eyes intent upon the throng,
And, as the palfies open, wind along. Gay.

Swift ascending from the azure wave,
He took the path that winded to the cave. Pope.
